

【大谷家文書】6-69-2

Handwritten Japanese calligraphy on a piece of aged paper. The text is written in a cursive style (sōsho) and is arranged in six vertical columns, reading from right to left. The characters are dark ink on a light brown background. The first column on the right contains two lines of text, while the subsequent five columns each contain a single line. The paper shows signs of aging, including creases and discoloration.

